NIGHT OF THE LIVING RED

Year: 2016

Location: Australia

Contents: Durif, Cabernet Sauvignon, Touriga

Over the course of three days there have been numerous reports from witnesses hearing strange noises in the local vineyards. ~~There were~~ no definite sightings until Monday 20th April when the creature first came into view. It was first spotted among the Durif and the Cabernet and then later in the Touriga. It is likely that this was the same creature but it is too early to confirm at this stage.

It was finally tracked down to the Studio, where a few lucky souls were able to harness it, bound by oak clasped in metal. A brooding vinous core, ~~beating frenzied passion through its veins, thick and deep as blood.~~ Responsive to pleasure and pain alike.

Our investigations lead us to the prime suspects:

Ralph Graham and Roccat Vineyards (named locally as Anthony Catanzariti and Joe Rocca) were the sources of the Durif. Griffith is a region famed for its consistent quality and power. The folks from One Tree Hill - Roccat - have been known to us for a while for their previous works... as can be expected, here's another vintage of dark and brooding grapes.

The Cabernet Sauvignon comes from the (in)famous Adrian "Hoffy" Hoffmann. We know that he's a fifth generation grower in the area of Ebenezer, in the Barossa. His vines have a legendary status among the locals, with some coming it at over 130 years old.

It's been harder to trace the Touriga... all we know is it is from an old, abandoned source, deep in South Australia. It's precise roots cannot be located, lost forever. However, we can ascertain that its production through a solera system results in an unmatched depth and intense flavour.
